GERMANS IN FULL RETREAT FROM SICILY

The War Today...

By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

WE have in Sicily the seemingly paradoxical spectacle of the Germans battling to a bloody finish against the Anglo-American advance, whereas in the vastly important struggle for Tunisia—Hitler's last toe-hold in North Africa—the Nazis surrendered wholesale when cornered.

This striking difference in behavior is attracting the attention of observers, and indeed it is highly important that we know what is behind it. It is suggested by some writers that this reversal of form in the German ranks is due to recognition that the reich is now in dire peril and must be defended to the death, whereas the Nazis troops in Tunisia didn't regard that zone as vital to the fatherland.

Having seen the Boche in operation in two wars I don't believe that's the answer to our phenomenon in Sicily. Rather I think that the famous General Montgomery gave us the key when he remarked to me in North Africa last December:

"The German is a good soldier and will fight, though I believe it is true that once you get him down he cracks up."

As I see it the Germans quit in Tunisia, not because that country wasn't vital to their master but because they realized that continuation of the struggle was equivalent to suicide. They had no hope of beating the Allies and they had no hope of escaping from the trap into which they had been pushed.

The situation in Sicily, however, is quite different despite the fact that the Boche know they haven't a whisper of a hope of holding the island. While they fully recognize that they must "abandon ship," they undoubtedly believe (1) that they have a fair chance of pulling off a Dunkerque and escaping to the mainland (in fact some of them already have made the bloody passage of Messina strait), and (2) that once they are on the mainland they ultimately will be able to join the German troops which are holding the line of the Po river in northern Italy in force.

In short, the German soldier doesn't look on the Italian adventure as suicidal, despite the fierceness of the struggle. That doesn't necessarily mean he thinks the fatherland is headed for victory. He may or may not believe that. However, he probably thinks—and not without reason—that he has a chance of fighting his way back into Germany and coming through the war alive.

The same psychological reaction undoubtedly inspires the Nazis who

Confesses Murder of Twin Boys

Confession to the kidnap-slaying of Charles and James Collins, 13-year-old twin brothers, and the kidnap-attack of a nine-year-old boy has been given to Cleveland police by Henry William Hagert, 17, who was released only a few days ago from the psychopathic ward of City hospital. The youth is pictured, right above, handcuffed to a detective as he led police to the lonely wooded suburban spot where he had left the twins' bodies after shooting them. (International)

TO CHARGE BOY WITH MURDER

17-Year-Old Reform School Parolee Admits Killing Cleveland Twins

(By Associated Press) CLEVELAND, Aug. 14.—Detective Inspector Frank W. Story said today he would place a murder charge against Henry Hagert, reform school parolee, for the double slaying of James and Charles Collins, 13-year-old twins.

Story reported Hagert, who will be 18 next month, confessed killing the twins last Thursday "for the heck of it" and because "I didn't like them," and also admitted attacking Jack Buchanan, nine-year-old son of City Food Inspector E. B. Buchanan, the day before.

The suspect had been released from the psychopathic ward at City hospital only two days before the attack on the Buchanan boy, hospital officials said.

As the murder charge was prepared for filing in juvenile court, the social tragedy brought a wave of demands for action against degenerates and a pledge from Gov. John W. Bricker for State Welfare department aid toward this end.

"We want to assure the officials of Cleveland the state welfare department will do anything in its power to help them find the answer to the problem," Gov. Bricker said.

The slain twins, James and Charles Collins, shot through the back of the head, were found late yesterday in a wooded section of suburban Bay Village.

Detective Story quoted Henry Hagert as admitting he killed the twins "just for the heck of it" and because "I didn't like them."

SOVIETS PUSH GERMANS BACK NEAR KHARKOV

Reds Fighting Way Into Streets In Some Sections of City

(By Associated Press) MOSCOW, Aug. 14.—The Red army has battered its way into the streets of Kharkov from several directions and obtained a firm vice-like hold about that Ukraine steel center, front line dispatches said today.

To the north where Russian forces had piled on another offensive in the gradually developing summer campaign, two other German defense hubs, Bryansk and Smolensk, were menaced by the smashing of strong fortifications in the Spas Demensk sector.

The Russian midnight communique indicated the Red army was forcing the Nazis back all along a front that stretched 500 miles south from Smolensk to the Ukrainian city of Kharkov. The Russian army had already penetrated the suburbs of Kharkov.

Heavy fighting reported in the central sector, the Red army was reported to have advanced steadily along the railroad from Orel toward Bryansk and heavy fighting was reported at Karachev, only 28 miles from the city.

The new offensive is near the western-most point in the Russian lines.

The Russians said one column had pushed 13 miles in the last three days to take the town of Pavlovino, 73 miles from Smolensk. The advance was accompanied by what was described as a powerful artillery attack which shattered German defenses and permitted the Russians to break through and capture 100 villages. More than 2,000 Germans were killed in the fighting.

The bulletin indicated that the fall of Kharkov, held by the Russians for a brief period early this year after the German retreat from Stalingrad, was imminent.

The advance on Bryansk, the Russians said, was continuing steadily in the face of stubborn German resistance.

SALAMAU RUINED BY U. S. BOMBERS

Japan's Vital Air Base In New Guinea Undergoes Heavy Attack

(By Associated Press) ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Aug. 14.—Much of Salamaua, Japan's vital air base on northeastern New Guinea, lay in smoking ruins today, devastated in 45 minutes by 177 tons of bombs.

Debris littered the waterfront of the one-mile long isthmus; the big airfield, two miles inland, was the scene of widespread damage; Chinatown and the village of Kela, which faces Salamaua across a bay, were covered with dust and smoke.

Whether this raid presages capture of Salamaua remains to be seen. But it was just such a concentrated aerial blasting which preceded the last decisive ground triumph scored by the Allies in the New Guinea sector. That was the capture in mid-July of Mubo.

Today's communique gave this picture of the devastation wrought by Friday's raiders, attacking in five waves:

"The whole area was covered with dust, smoke and debris. Fires rose to a height of 6,000 feet after the explosion of munition dumps. The portion of the town on the isthmus has virtually ceased to exist, and the whole area is in ruins."

More than 1,000 tons of bombs, dropped in 30-odd days of raiding, have burst upon Salamaua since the two-pronged Pacific offensive got under way June 30 with Salamaua the immediate objective on the left and the Munda airfield, New Guinea island, on the right.

Above Munda, captured Aug. 5, today's communique reported concerning the Solomons drive that Japanese resistance was crushed Friday at Zieta village by United States jungle troops who now are within three and a half miles of Balok harbor on the Ku'a gulf. Other forces already have the Japanese Garrison at Balok encircled.

The average national speed of passenger cars is 39 miles an hour, the agency said, adding that "only 37 percent of all passenger car drivers exceed 40 miles an hour."

STORMS CAUSE OF TWO DEATHS

Many Others Injured In Northern Ohio; Factories Are Damaged

(By Associated Press) Tornadoes and wind storms which ripped northern Ohio last night killed two persons, injured scores of others, halted war production in three plants and caused damage reckoned at close to a million dollars.

The dead were Mrs. Josephine Lowe, 64, of Cleveland, buried under the wreckage of the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Krapp, west of Vermilion, and John Seiby, 25, of Waynesburg, who died when a twisted destroyed the CCC Trucking Co.'s garage and warehouse at Canton.

War production was halted at the Carnegie Steel Corp., the Barium Stainless Steel Corp. and the No. 2 plant of Diebold, Inc., at Canton. Several homes were struck by lightning and many windows shattered. Felled power lines plunged the city into darkness for several hours. A score of persons were admitted to hospitals for treatment of minor injuries.

20 Treated at Warren A dozen houses were demolished at Leavittsburg, four miles west of Warren and more than 20 persons were removed to Warren hospitals for treatment.

Suburban Olmsted township near Cleveland was struck by a small tornado that destroyed three residences and badly damaged a score of others.

A third person possibly was killed at Leavittsburg. The three-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. McCollum, asleep on a davenport when the storm struck last night, was reported missing after the sofa was found in a river 60 feet away from the family's home. Two other children in the family were buried under wreckage of the home, but received only minor injuries.

Loss was estimated at approximately a million dollars at Canton. There at least 26 persons were injured as the tornado unroofed dozens of homes and lifted garages from their foundations.

Sgt. Davitt received the bronze oak leaf cluster to the air medal for destruction of one enemy aircraft and the air medal, for participation in five combat bomber missions.

Sgt. Komo received the bronze oak leaf cluster to the medal for destruction of an enemy air craft.

Bridge On Route 224 Opens August 22; Both Span Berlin Reservoir

State Route 224 and State Route 14 will be opened to traffic within a week, with the completion by the Ohio Department of Highways of bridges made necessary because of the building of Berlin reservoir, according to W. H. Moore, Division 4 engineer of Ravenna.

The Route 14 bridge, between Deerfield and North Benton, will be opened at 6 a. m. tomorrow and the Route 224 bridge is scheduled for opening just a week later, on Sunday, Aug. 22.

Both of these structures were built under extraordinary circumstances, but both are to be completed ahead of schedule.

The Route 14 bridge is a five span, concrete beam bridge, 370 feet in length. The entire project is just a little less than a mile in length. A substructure has been built which will take care of another lane of traffic, and will probably be completed as a post war war project. The roadway on the present bridge is 24 feet wide, with a three foot sidewalk.

25 Feet Above Old Bridge The floor of the new bridge is 25 feet above the original bridge. In filling for the approaches for the bridge it was necessary to move over 75,000 cubic yards of dirt and stone.

The flash flood which occurred last Dec. 30, shortly after construction work was started, did not cause much direct loss on this job, but retarded normal construction progress considerably. As the waters continued to rise in Berlin reservoir, far beyond expectations, there was a continuous struggle to keep ahead.

It was necessary to build a temporary dike completely around the last pier and at the time the last concrete was poured the water line was far above the point where the work was being done.

When the reservoir is filled, water under the bridge will be 41 feet deep and cover practically all of the substructure.

The Route 14 bridge was built by the D. A. Mullett Construction Co., of Pittsburgh, for the Ohio Department of Highways at a contract price of $319,858, and is scheduled for completion on Oct. 31.

Modern Bridge Design

The bridge on State Route 224 between Berlin Center and Deerfield is one of the most spectacular structures in northern Ohio, and stands as an exhibit of modern highway bridge design and construction.

The bridge itself is 408 feet in length, with two 120 foot spans and two 84 foot spans. The pavement on this bridge is 24 feet wide, with

25 PERCENT GAS CUT IS ORDERED

Ration Coupons Will Be Worth Only Three Gallons On Monday

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Law for the midwest and southwest, a promise of more for the east and in time, abolition of the pleasure-driving ban was decreed by government authorities today.

It provided that:

1. Gas ration coupons in the midwest and southwest are worth three gallons instead of four starting at 12:01 a. m. Monday.

2.—The ban on pleasure driving in the 12 northeastern states may be lifted by Sept. 1 if current restrictions are obeyed.

3.—More gas for the east is in prospect for possibly late in September.

The Atlantic coast states have been getting along on 1½ gallon per "A" coupon, and 2½ for "B" and "C" tickets.

OPA made its announcement because, said Acting Administrator Chester Bowles, "with the reductions in supplies allotted to us, no (other) course was possible."

OPA's announcement of gasoline ration cuts in the midwest and southwest coincided with a statement from Interior Secretary Ickes that available gasoline in those sections would be off 15 per cent from the June consumption.

Washington was about the last official source in the country to announce the 25 per cent gasoline cut to midwest and southwest motorists. Original plans were to announce the cut from here next Sunday, while filling stations were closed, and thus prevent a rush of motorists to gasoline pumps.

But the news came in dribs and drabs from all over the midwest and southwest yesterday. It became so general that OPA hastened its announcement.

Ickes said reduced civilian consumption of gasoline "is necessary because of an already-existing shortage of crude oil in that area and an impending shortage overall brought to a head by huge military requirements."

Bowles said it was OPA's hope that the cut in the midwest and southwest would build up sufficient supplies to increase the value of coupons in the 17 Atlantic coast states, possibly in September.

FLEE TO ITALY UNDER SEVERE BOMBARDMENT

Axis Island Defense Line Cracks With Capture Of Randazzo

(By Associated Press) ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Aug. 14.—Pelted by everything from blockbusters to machine-gun bullets from the air and artillery fire from the sea, the German army has begun a full-scale evacuation in an effort to save as much material and manpower as possible from the wreckage of Sicily for the battle of Italy.

With their center caved in by the Allied capture of Randazzo, north of Mt. Etna, the Germans put their evacuation machinery into full swing, it was officially announced today. They were retreating behind a strong rear guard which fell back rapidly in front of victorious British and American infantry attacks.

Sweeping to within 34 miles of Messina in virtually all sectors, the Allies captured Piraino on the north coast, Floresta in the central sector, and Riposto, Giardini and Milo on the east coast.

All Mt. Etna now is in Allied hands. An Allied commentator, confirming previous field reports of the German withdrawal said there no longer was any question but that the Germans' sole aim was to escape to the Italian mainland with as many troops and as much equipment as possible.

Under Constant Fire Allied aerial reconnaissance showed that ships crossing the narrow, bomb-tossed Messina strait, were arriving empty on the Sicilian beaches and departing loaded, he said.

The strait, he added, was under constant fire from British light cruisers and coastal batteries. "The British Eighth army thrusting up the east coast has taken Riposto, 10 miles south of Taormina, while Americans have overrun Floresta, inland midway between captured Randazzo and Cape Orlando, and Piraino on the north coast."

At the same time it was disclosed that the American Ninth division—heretofore not known publicly to have been in action in Sicily—was "the first to take Randazzo." It was followed by the British 78th division.

The communique added that Allied forces continued their advances in all sectors yesterday and made considerable progress in the center.

The capture of Floresta, about midway from Randazzo and Cape Orlando, placed the Allied drive within 28 miles of Messina.

Riposto's fall clears the way for the British army's northward advance on Taormina, terminus of the highway linking Randazzo with the coast and escape route for German forces retreating from Randazzo.

The communique said also that the British coastal forces had overrun Giardini, which lies just southeast of Riposto, and Milo, a village on the eastern slopes of Mount Etna.

Enemy rear guards retreating from Randazzo to Taormina, about 20 miles away, were being steadily pursued by the central Allied forces, the announcement said, adding that stiff resistance was being encountered from the suicide German detachments.

In capturing Piraino, the Americans had swept about three miles beyond Broletto, which fell earlier in the week to an amphibious flanking attack behind the German defenses at Cape Orlando.

A LITTLE HELP TOO LATE

Many of the things Washington has done to relieve minor troubles of the American public have come too late to do any good.

It put a ceiling price on raspberries after practically all the crop had been sold at prices up to twice the ceiling limit. It releases synthetic rubber for fruit jar rings after all of this year's supply has been manufactured and it provides more wool for civilian clothes when this winter's suits are already on the store racks or in shipment.

Now the authorities have come around to the decision that it is a good thing for the housewives to make jams and jellies for the family bread. Heretofore these were frowned upon and a limit of five pounds of sugar was allotted for this purpose and any housewife knows that five pounds doesn't make enough jelly to cover many slices of bread for the boys and girls when they come home from school.

Dispatches say there probably will be additional sugar allowances for jelly making but the queen of the kitchen won't shout with joy because the most desirable things for making jelly are now out of season. We're getting used to substitutes but making jelly out of turnips is going a little too far.

None of these things is vitally important, either to the success of the war or the preservation of the civilian morale and well being. They make us wonder, however, whether the same policy of "too late" is being applied to the things that really count.

THE MAN WHO ISN'T THERE

It would be sensational news and most welcome to the United Nations people to be able to announce that Premier Stalin had joined Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt in their conference, but the fact that he isn't there does not signify any lack of unity.

Problems on the eastern front and the western and southern European fronts are vital to each other in the final analysis but in their immediate development they have little connection. Russia has shown that she doesn't want or need other nations' troops in Russia and she can't send her own to help elsewhere.

Yet each is indispensable to the other. Russia desperately needs the millions of tons of American and British tanks and planes and other weapons which have given her at least equality with the Germans. The United Nations need just as desperately the Russian armies which have kept a couple of hundred Nazi divisions so busy on the eastern sector.

Mr. Stalin, we may be sure, is informed of the Roosevelt-Churchill talks and they, no doubt, know much of the Russian plans and prospects. Each is doing a good job at the immediate assignment. There is small ground for satisfaction to the Nazis in Mr. Stalin's absence. The news from the Russian battlefields makes it apparent that the Germans generally probably would be greatly relieved if he were to go to Quebec for a confab instead of staying at home to direct his armies which are pushing the "supermen" toward their own boundaries at so fast a rate.

SPEND IT WISELY

The smoke was still rising from Pearl Harbor when Congress came to the decision that it is cheaper to spend money than lives. Since that time every request of the army, navy and air force for funds has been answered promptly with an appropriation and with less quibbling than Congress ever saw when so great an issue was concerned.

Appropriations now available for carrying on the war amount to $203,000,000,000 or enough to run the war for the next two years. Now congress has gotten around to the point of asking the military for an accounting as to how this money is to be spent.

Senator Byrd's committee on non-essential spending is calling on all the war agencies for a statement. This is the first step in a program for curbing unnecessary spending. There has been a lot of it during these first 20 months of war. It has been excused because the main thing was to get ready for war and to get ready quickly.

By this time, many lessons have been learned, many mistakes discovered and some of them corrected and it is time to get war expenditures down to an efficient basis with as much economy as is consistent with the most vigorous prosecution of the war.

Congress, the treasury department and other agencies are hunting in all the corners for ways to find new taxes and increase revenues. They are referred to Cicero who said: "Men do not realize how great a revenue economy is."

LIFE AMID THE RUINS

Correspondents have been too busy with the tremendous drama of war to tell what is happening in Russia's ruined cities as they are retaken from the Nazis but there is a glimpse into the Russian revival in a brief dispatch saying that two theaters in Stalin-grad have reopened and that a third is to start soon.

The story is interesting proof of the survival of the Russian spirit. With homes in rubble, cities demolished, families broken up and the richest part of the nation laid waste by war, the Russian people carry on with the spirit which has rebuilt their country every time it has been laid waste by enemies.

We had an interesting letter not long ago from a soldier stationed in Persia. He said that a Russian dramatic company had just presented a show for the American soldiers there. They couldn't understand a word of the dialog but they enjoyed the show nevertheless.

This reverse of lend lease of talent is but another evidence of the ability of the people to survive invasion, pillage and mass destruction which they have known many times since Genghis Khan swept over their provinces with fire and sword 700 years ago.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, August 15

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds augury of great activity, both public and private, with affairs of church and clergy prosperous. But there may be some sort of opposition or disagreement with superiors and as well a tendency to extravagance, waste and indulgence. All should endeavor to stabilize for endurance and permanency. Exercise good judgment and foresight, with prudence expenditures as well.

Those whose birthday it is may have the opportunity for putting their affairs on a firm and enduring basis, with future security and economic freedom the main objective. Diligence, concentrated effort, sound tactics and foresight should effect this end. However, there may be want of cooperation from superiors or employers, and an inclination for indulgence, extravagance and unwarranted outlay or expenditures may prove detrimental. Slow but sure is the slogan.

A child born on this day may have excellent qualities of character and sound abilities and aspirations although excessive generosity may lead it to extremes in indulgence and expenditure.

For Monday, August 16

MONDAY'S astrological forecast may not be interpreted as favorable. A definite danger from an uprooting and separative influence, precipitated by unfortunate quarrels, tempers, passions and emotional impulses or erratic moves, may prove devastating on circumstances, the fortunes, the health and peace of mind. A call for restraints, reason and moderation.

Those whose birthday it is may draw down upon themselves a sudden disruptive and injurious state of affairs, undermining their prospects for success, happiness and peace of mind. This by a tempestuous attitude, overenergetic use of the forces and faculties, as well as indulging in passionate and erratic impulses and emotions. It is an uprooting and separative force, precipitated by what might be turned into highly constructive channels, by restraint, self-control and calm decisions. Such devastation may have regrettable reactions on the physical and nervous well-being.

A child born on this day may be over zealous, impulsive, erratic, to its undoing. But with restraint it might accomplish much.

We have had minor successes so far. Sicily is only an outpost and its fall would not mean the end of the war. We still have to gain a foothold on the European continent itself—Navy Secretary Frank Knox.

Only the people can hold down inflation and they are smart enough to do it if the way is prepared and insistently sold them.—Henry Bruere, New York banker.

You cannot say you were in action. You cannot write home to say you took Sicily single-handed or even in good company.—Navy censor to invasion crewmen.

THIS CONFAB SEEMS TO HAVE ACHIEVED ITS GOAL

Doctor Discusses Russia at War

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I CONFESS to a weakness for the books about conditions within beleaguered countries at war. The newspaper correspondents' accounts are far better than the

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

ambassadorial or official versions—the correspondents get around more, have a more comprehensive view of what the common people think.

THE LAST TRAIN FROM BERLIN seems to me the best account of the German situation, and RUSSIA FIGHTS, by James E. Brown (published by Scribners, New York), far and away the most vivid picture I have encountered of what the Russians are doing.

The Russians, according to Mr. Brown, are thinking this—they are for Russia and nobody else. They have done four-fifths of the work in stopping the Nazis and when they get what they want they are probably going to quit.

Unless Japan attacks them, they are not going to declare war on Japan for us or anybody else. Their post-war policy is isolationism and plenty of it.

They are going to rebuild Russia their own way. They had felt that before the war they were surrounded by a hostile ring of capitalist states, and the fact that they got very little help when they were in trouble has made them sore.

I must say this attitude makes sense. It stiffens your backbone. It is a good antidote to the treacle about internationalism of Mr. Lippmann and Mr. Wilkie.

The account of Mr. Churchill's visit to Moscow is rich. He appeared at an official Soviet banquet in overalls, which didn't make near the hit that he makes at the White house.

Mr. Wilkie's visit made a much better impression. The accounts of these two visits, the pen picture of Stalingrad, the factory workers, the amazing development of Russian women, nurses and ambulance drivers at the front, the Bakunia trials, the probable successor to Stalin, are at worth reading in detail.

Here are some thoughts: An official said, "Our neighbors start the wars, we don't. There would be no wars if the other nations of the world adopted our social system."

Hospital Work

I was interested in the accounts Mr. Brown gives of the work of the hospitals. However we may feel about it here, socialized medicine works in Russia. The nursing is efficient, the hospitals clean, the medical attendance intelligent, and the patients are individualized in treatment as they should be.

"There are fewer deaths from serious wounds than in other wars; we take care of casualties better; we give emergency treatment on the battlefield," a military surgeon told the author. "Then the sulfa drugs have saved many lives. We get a good deal of sulfa from America, but we need more of it."

All that sounds very alert and up-to-date.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendenning has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendenning, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

My bones just ache to get out there and take a crack at the Axis, but that is exactly why I can't do it—my bones ache too much. It's those youngsters with plenty of pep and zip in them who are going to show the Japs and Germans what they're up against. And they can do it, too! But we old timers can do something. Buy war bonds and stamps to keep our boys properly equipped and buy as many as we can. I'm not just talking to have something to say. It is our duty to give at least 10% of our wages to buy war stamps. We can do that easily compared to the sacrifice all those boys are making. We can't let them down. They're counting on us all. Don't let their sacrifice be in vain!

9:15 a. m. The pastor's adult Bible class, Lee Schaefer, supt.
10 a. m. Divine worship service; sermon theme, "A True Friend"; Text: (1st Samuel 18, 1-3) "And it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking unto Saul, that an end of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David and Jonathan loved him as his own soul"; first in a series of sermons on the general theme, "Love Is Strong As Death."
"Our Biggest Blunder"

"Some weeks ago I read of an unique book, in which some five hundred men have written down the greatest blunder they thought they had made in life. Among them are the following: "Reading worthless books"; "Did not stick to one thing"; "Careless about my religious duties"; "Forsaking my church and my mother"; "Not saving money when I was young"; "Refusing a steady position with a good firm"; "Wasted good time when I was at school"; "Thinking the boss could not do without me"; "Would not hearken to the advice of older people"; "The greatest blunder of my life was not accepting Christ and thereby avoiding many sorrows caused by serving Satan."
"All of us, but especially youth, study this carefully with much profit. Somehow we learn so little from the mistakes of others. We easily see them and comment and criticize. But to apply them wisely to our own personal circumstances—well, that is another blunder most men readily make."

"After our earth-experience is over, too many will realize that the greatest blunder they made in life was disregarding, neglecting or even refusing to surrender completely to the Savior, who died to give us eternal satisfaction and salvation. Shall we continue to blunder by not serving the Lord Jesus with all our hearts, our souls, our minds?—Rev. Bauman.

CATHOLICS OBSERVE PRAYER DAY SUNDAY
YOUNGSTOWN, Aug. 14.—Bishop James A. McFadden, in his first pastoral letter as head of the new Catholic diocese of Youngstown, has set aside Sunday as a day of prayers for peace.
He has ordered exposition of the blessed sacrament from the first mass Sunday until 5 p. m. and has directed that the day be closed in each parish with a Holy hour in which "special prayers to the mother of God be said."

The letter also says that Friday is to be a day for exposition of the sacrament throughout the see until further notice. A special prayer which is in every priest's missal for use in times of great crisis such as war must be said at each mass.
Enclosed with the bishop's letter was a transcript of that written by the Pope which requests prayers for peace by every Catholic in the world on Mary's feast day and a copy or a prayer to Mary for peace.

Trinity Lutheran

Rev. George D. Keister
9:45 a. m. Church school, with classes for all ages; lesson topic, "God provides for His people (scripture text, Exodus 16:11-18, 17:3-6; Golden text, "Give us this day our daily bread.")
11 a. m. Morning worship; sermon topic, "Treasures: Acid-Tested."

"The most humble or poverty-stricken individual has a treasure or treasures of some nature. The present trend of prosperity has increased the physical treasures of many persons. It is possible that the emphasis upon the physical and visible elements of life may lead some people to place their devotion and loyalty on earthly treasures. Some of the most valuable of treasures of humanity cannot be weighed on earthly scales, nor computed with the measurements of man's devising. Treasures should stand the acid-test. A treasurer is to be mastered not to be the master. It must never control and dominate the thoughts and actions of the owner. Treasures must have the quality of endurance. There is little value of that which we think is quite valuable, to soon find that it has been taken away from us, or has vanished in thin air. Treasures should prove to be channels of blessing. Any treasure should increase the joys and expansions of life. It must never rob and deprive a person or persons of the widest and finest blessings of life. God is the source and author of the finest and most blessed treasures of all life. Without His treasures, the worldly rich are paupers of the poorest condition."—Rev. Keister.

Christian Science

"Soul" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read at the morning worship of the Christian Science Society tomorrow. (Sunday service also broadcast over radio station WCLE, Cleveland, 610 kil, the first and third Sundays of each month at 11).

The reading room and services are open to the public.
Golden Text is "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul" (Psalms 23:1-3).
Included in the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon are the following correlative passages from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "And He said unto His disciples, Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, neither for the body, what ye shall put on. But rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Luke 12:22-31). "All nature teaches God's love to man, but man cannot love God supremely and set his whole affections on spiritual things, while loving the material or trusting in it more than in the spiritual."

Army Dentists In India China, Fought Own Battle

By ROBERT P. MARTIN
United Press Correspondent

CHUNGKING — Fighting an uphill battle against lack of personnel and equipment, U. S. Army dentists in the past year have maintained the health of American soldiers in the China-Burma-India theater while simultaneously laying the groundwork for the first organized dental service in the Chinese Army.

When the first dental unit arrived at an Indian port in April, 1942, it faced the task of caring for an average of 1,000 men per dentist compared to the normal army ratio of one dentist for each 500 men. It had only field dental equipment with a minimum of filling material, medicines and instruments. Clinics were established at the major American bases and 16 hours was the normal working day.

Maj. Walter J. Newton, 31, of Olathe, Kan., a graduate of the Kansas City Dental College, and a private practitioner in Oklahoma City before he joined the Army, was in charge of the first unit. His first job, however, was not pulling teeth but constructing a bomb dispersal area at the Indian port.

"The jobs were slightly different," Major Newton said, "but I had had a little experience in engineering and General Wheeler was short of engineers. It was comparatively easy, just interpreting blueprints. But it was the biggest cavity I ever worked on."

Clinic Is Now Well Equipped
Lend-lease supplies originally intended for China eased the supply situation. A shipment of several hundred tons of equipment was diverted to India when the Japanese smashed toward Rangoon in the opening days of their Burma campaign. There was no hope of getting the supplies to China, so the Army requisitioned them. Other supplies were purchased in India and these enabled the dental corps to get through the crisis of the next four or five months until regular shipments began arriving from the United States.

The clinics in India now rival the best dental offices in the U. S., since they have the most modern equipment available. Army dentists in China, however, still utilize foot-powered drills because of lack of electric power. Any soldier can get his teeth cared for at almost any time, due to the increase in personnel and equipment. And the dentists take up arms when they are accused of being too impersonal in their work or of not turning out as good work as they would in private practice.

"We handle two or three times as many men in one day as the average practicing dentist at home," Capt. Fred S. Sammons of Chicago, told me. "But we don't have to spend time selling our work to the patient. These boys are getting better dental care than most of them ever had in their lives. If we are impersonal it's only because we have so many patients and that doesn't mean they aren't getting the best we can give them."

Not satisfied with working only for the American soldiers, Lt. Col. Clare T. Budge, 36, of Logan, Utah, India-China theater dental surgeon, opened a training center for Chinese. These men, most of them from the Chinese Army's pharmaceutical department, received two months' training under Colonel Budge at a training center in India. They were taught emergency oral surgery for soldiers at the front, anaesthesia and oral hygiene. A special field kit was designed for the Chinese which was not as bulky as the American kit.

Surpass Americans' Teeth
"They did a damned good job on the Chinese soldiers," Budge commented. "The Chinese Army doesn't seem to need fully-trained and equipped dental surgeons. All of the country boys had practically perfect teeth, while the soldiers from the city were not so well off. All in all, the Chinese had better teeth than the Americans. We don't know the reason—maybe it was due to their teeth structure or their diet, since the average Chinese eats very little sweets. Mouth diseases, however, were as prevalent as among the Americans."

Members of the Army dental service rarely if ever get medals for their work and seldom see actual combat, but there is little question that they and their colleagues in the medical service sacrifice as much in their personal life as any men in the Army.

Lt. Col. Thomas A. Price, 45, of Danville, Va., is an example of this. American soldiers eat nearly twice as much as civilians.

Cole Circus Plans Show Wednesday

The James M. Cole circus will show in Salem next Wednesday, with performances at 3 and 8 p. m. Arrangements were completed today for the circus to pitch its tents at the Benton road show grounds. The big show, making its first appearance here, comes from a long tour.

Traveling via 35 motorized units, the circus carries about 50 head of trained and wild animals, 200 performers and working people. The 1943 Victory tour of the Cole circus offers 20 outstanding acts of circus entertainment, starring Tim Mix, Jr., popular singing cowboy star with his group of Colorado cowboys.

Bud Anderson, popular circus showman presents an act of western horses, one of the most elaborated displays of trained horses ever arranged. Eva, the world's greatest performing elephant, and Capt. Waterman's trained Buffalos, also will be seen, besides aerialists, acrobats and clowns.

When he went into the Army, he abandoned a lucrative practice in Miami, Fla., and sold his equipment, house and other possessions.

"None of us will have any equipment, and none of the equipment purchased by the army can be sold until five years after the war. That means we will have to buy all new equipment unless we can put one of these machines in our pocket," he added, pointing to a power-driven combination that must have weighed 800 pounds.

American soldiers eat nearly twice as much as civilians.

Moves Mountain For Lofty Victory Garden

WALDEN, Colo. — C. J. Ownsby, Union Pacific agent at this station of 8,700 elevation, practically had to move a mountain to plant his victory garden.

He cleared an area of its rocky top soil, then dumped on it several tons of dirt hauled for three fourths of a mile by pushcart.

He used old rail ties and log slabs to build a strong barricade around the tract. That he explained, was to keep out livestock and occasional wandering deer.

From his garden he and his wife have obtained frost proof beans, peas, kale, head lettuce, radishes and lettuce. Walden 65 miles south of Laramie, Wyo., is 187 feet higher than Sherman Station, highest point on the Union Pacific railroad.

"THE HOUSE OF COPE"

This is the Way I'm Keeping In the Fight!

I'm doing all I can in the war effort, and I'm buying all the war stamps I can afford in the hopes that my little bit may end this war a little sooner. No one wants this war to last longer. The sooner it's over the happier everyone will be. Who doesn't have beautiful dreams of "after the war plans," dreams that are still rather hazy because of the indefinite length of time before they will be a reality. Our thoughts turn to a boy in the service when we think of "after the war" because he appears in these dreams that will some day be more than just a dream. If everyone gave as much as he could to buy war bonds and stamps, we all might be able to bring those boys home to us sooner.

The July total was 300,000 above the previous high recorded in July and August of last year. The number of men employed dropped 2,700,000 during the year, reflecting heavy military inductions, and stood at 37,300,000 in July, whereas the number of women workers increased 3,000,000 to 17,000,000.

AMERICAN BRED by FRANKEN MELONEY

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Paul had picked a private little corner for himself, and fitted it out with a collection of pails, towels and instruments worthy of a field hospital. Ann watched his sure, swift strokes. There was something of genius in what he was doing.

Flashing curved scissors cut back long hairs to give a sharp flesh line. Rowdy's beautiful, ever-curious whiskers were deftly snipped, and her ears clipped and rubbed until they were as translucent as old black English porcelain. Next, sand and emery papers; after that, a soft grooming brush to burnish her coat to a flawless perfection; and last of all, brilliantine until she was fashioned into a glowing living thing of highlights and dark shadows.

Rowdy seemed to take to it as if it were an old story in her life. "You're just eating it up, you glamorous girl!" Ann said huskily, feeling like a mother who sees her baby suddenly transformed into a debutante.

Paul sat back on his heels and viewed his work. "Well, he approved, 'that's all that man can do for her. She has to get the rest of the way on her own."

"She's magnificent!" Ann breathed. "Fair? Sure it's fair, he brusquely declared. "I can't make her a better dog than she is, but I can make the best of what she's got, and then all I can do is hope the judge knows what to look for—Now come on, we're late."

As they returned to the bench, a fawn dog was paraded by his handler carrying a purple ribbon.

"Oh," Ann exclaimed in mingled hope and dismay, "we've missed the show!"

"No such luck. That's Peterson's Achilles; he took Winner's Male—Hi, Pete, congratulations—" He turned back to Ann. "Our classes are just coming up, we've still got a wait ahead of us. Puppies, Limit, Novice, and then American Bred—that's us. You better go over to the ring. You'll just get nervous hanging around here."

Paul wasn't nervous. He was a portrait of a calm and collected young man, lighting a cigarette by holding the trembling match a full six inches away from it.

The puppies had already been judged by the time Ann reached the ring. A white-haired old gentleman with a military waxed moustache was handing out four ribbons, blue, red, white and yellow. Ann eyed the winner with misgiving. What a magnificent animal! It had been nothing short of madness to let Rowdy in for this—a schoolgirl's dream that she could retrieve Paul's fortunes by a kind of Miss Horatio Alger fairy tale.

The novices were being led into the ring. She saw Christopher hand over Gretel's leash to Hans. Then he caught sight of her, and came over and stood beside her.

"Excited?"

"No." Her voice sounded to her ears like wind through dry leaves. "Are you?"

"Me? Oh, this is an old story." In spite of his bravado, she noticed that he, too, was having difficulty lighting his cigarette. In the end, he puffed it cold for a moment, and then carefully ground out coals that had never been.

"I like the judge," Ann whispered. "He looks like a daguerreotype."

"He's good," Christopher whispered back. "Best fit the circuit. Knows his dogs. Name's Barrie, Dr. Kells Barrie. There they go!"

Fes, it had commenced—like some mysterious performance of initiation. The dogs paraded in a large circle, while the judge knelt with supernatural intensity. Then they wheeled into an extended line, and he examined each animal as if he were taking it apart and putting it together again. He looked at mouths, eyes, ears. He put his hand on their quarters and let his weight test soundness of limb, after which he put each dog through its paces, walking, galting, and standing still. And never so much as by flicker of an eye did he disclose his mind. As he came to Gretel Ann's hand went out to Christopher's arm. She looked up at him and saw that his face was set and a little pale.

"Gretel's lost," he muttered grimly. "The fawn's got it."

"Don't be silly, it's impossible to tell—"

But Wain was right. As long as she lived Ann would never know by what subtle shades of penetration Christopher had discerned it, for it was minutes later when Dr. Barrie picked up a handful of ribbons, and like a general commanding troops, indicated the four dogs of his choice. After what seemed an eternity, he placed Gretel second on line, and with a small ceremonious bow before the fawn, presented the handler with the ribbon.

"Oh—" Ann cried on a little moan of disappointment. "I'm so terribly sorry!"

Wain glanced at her. "Thanks. I really thank you mean it."

"Oh, I do!"

"It makes it pretty tough on Paul. Unless," he gave a short laugh. "Rowdy saves the day."

"Don't—" Ann implored. He caught her hand. "I didn't mean it that way. Look here, you're trembling. You mustn't."

"I had no right to enter her," Ann confessed abjectly. "At first I did it to spite you. Nothing good ever came of spite—"

"Nonsense, you believe in the pup."

Ann smiled. "The funny part of it is, I do."

And then, she saw Rowdy entering the ring with Paul, and the world went black.

Rowdy walked like a woman losing a stocking and having girld trouble at one and the same time. She held one ear erect; the other she wore with absent-minded carelessness. A car backfired in the distance. She came to attention, jumping like a startled camel, her tail shooting ignominiously between her legs.

Paul's face glistened with perspiration, and his coat showed damp spots across the back. People started to snicker. She heard a light tinkling laugh close at hand and looked around to see Brenda smiling up at Christopher.

"Too bad about Gretel. I was so hoping that she'd come up against Konstantine in Specials. It would have been dramatic—But maybe Miss Rivers' dog will take your place . . . You are Miss Rivers, aren't you? I met your sister up at your farm. Such a charming person. And I saw your puppy at the Sweepstakes—Well, here's hoping that she has better luck today."

Ann was aware of the guilty flush on Christopher's face and forgot her own troubles in his unhappy embarrassment. It was wicked to let him go on paying for his mistaken chivalry.

State Athletic Commissioner Predicts Successful Football Year With Fewer Teams Out

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS, Aug. 14.—The rigors of war have exacted a heavy toll in playing talent, coaches and equipment from Ohio's high schools. Athletic Commissioner H. R. Townsend said today, but the czar of Buckeye scholastic athletics predicted a "highly successful 1943 football campaign, despite the handicaps."

On the deficit side, Commissioner Townsend listed: Last year 477 Ohio high schools played football, putting the Buckeye state second only to Texas in the number of competing squads. This year only 400 schools will be in the Ohio scrap.

Between Sept. 1, 1942, and May 1, 1943, the Ohio schools lost 354 coaches. Prior to Sept. 1, more than 80 coaches departed. Of that total, 347 are definitely known to be in the service, along with many others who have left coaching jobs since May 1. There is a definite shortage of trained coaches.

The armed services have called a host of high school athletes, cutting deeply into the playing personnel. Others, still eligible for play, have given up athletics to get into essential industry, while boys living on farms probably will forego sports to help feed the nation.

Gasoline and travel restrictions, especially if the value of gasoline coupons is cut from four to three gallons, may upset schedules and attendance to some extent.

The Silver Lining. Shifting to the brighter side, Townsend declared:

"The various restrictions did not slash attendance last year, and I don't expect a drop this season. There is plenty of money available to buy tickets, and the fans want to see sports of all kinds. The gasoline problem may cut the attendance some, but the additional money angle will more than make up the difference.

"There is plenty of equipment on hand for the teams, and football shoes have been taken off the ration list. We have been shunted back to the old type footballs and basketballs, the newer molded balls being out for the duration. The change was made to allow use of reclaimed rubber, the molded balls demanding all new rubber.

"I'm in favor of carrying on to the limit, not only because of the recreation football gives the fans, but for the training it provides for boys about to enter the service. Football, of course, is the hard-earned hit of the scholastic sports. Basketball and all the others, I believe, will go on without a hitch. And plenty of spectators are assured."

Training Season Near
For teams which did not hold spring football practice, the fall training season starts Aug. 20. For those which held spring work-outs, the fall practice starts Sept. 1. The playing season extends from Sept. 17 to Nov. 27, both inclusive.

Townsend said he did not expect teams losing playing personnel to turn from 11-man to six-man football this year, since there was a heavy drop in the abbreviated sport a year ago.

"This season, and all the rest of the war seasons, if any," the commissioner said, "will provide varsity careers for a lot of boys who otherwise would not have been able to play. With the outstanding athletes in the service, the schools must call on secondary talent to fill their squads. It's a great thing for the boys, and it looks like a great season for the fans."

"Football is a great training medium for boys going into the armed services, and football is one thing Ohio has plenty of. And we'll continue to have it."

Find Gas Bootlegger

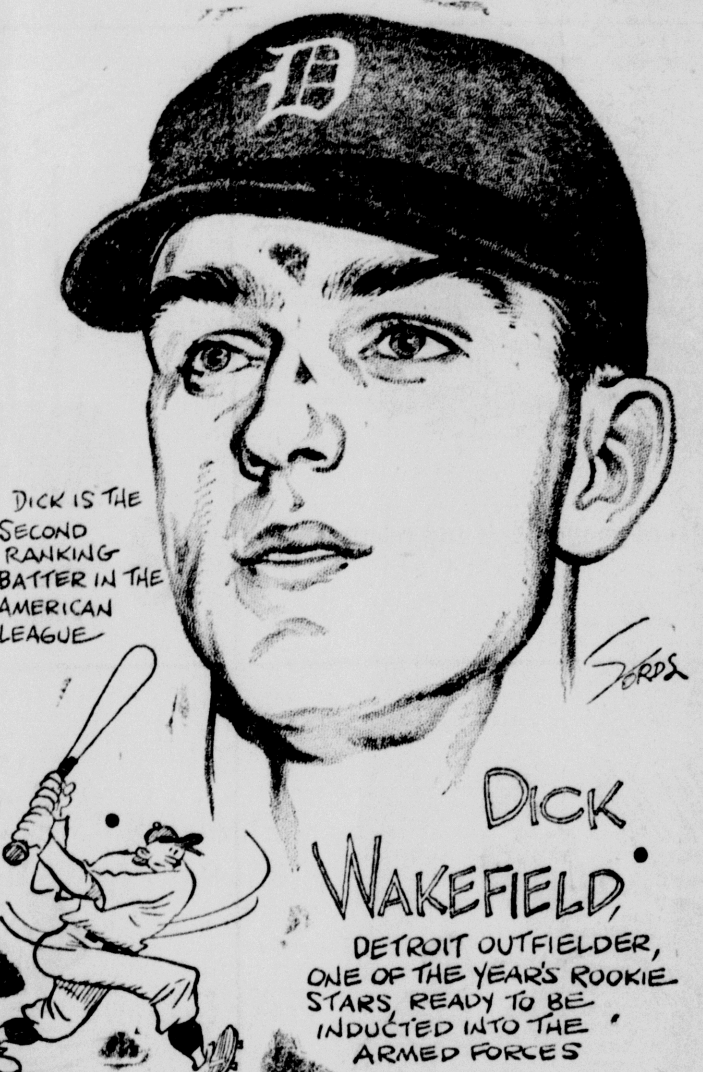

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—During World War I, when Lloyd George was first beginning to make things hum, the popular cry was "Let George Do It." Recently here, the magic seemed among gasoline bootleggers was "Irene Sent Me." The OPA ferreted out a gasoline black market where gasoline was sold without coupons at above price level ceilings by customers merely saying, "Irene Sent Me." Furthermore to OPA's surprise, it developed that "Irene" was a real live person. They have not revealed whether she is a "lady" or "gentleman."

BOUND FOR SERVICE - By Jack Sords

Interest Being Revived In Half-Ounce Casting Plug

PORTLAND, Ore.—Bring back the half-ounce plug in international casting competition after the war, you Isaac Walton, and A. C. Kellogg will give you a toss for your money—and perhaps another world's championship.

To give you a rough idea how the Portland Casting club's rangy president is flipping out that half-ounce, here's the distance he achieved in a recent exhibition: 392 feet!

And the world's record, held by England's J. E. May since 1938, is only 318 feet.

For some reason, American plug casting devotees spurned the half-ounce weight some 15 years ago and let the British run away with the field without the flick of a rod. The American went all out for plugs weighing three-eighths and five-eighths of an ounce and they've stuck to them for competitive purposes for years.

Lately, however, the Americans have been giving more than casual thought to that record which reposes in England. All over the country, says Kellogg, interest in the half-ounce plug is being revived.

Kellogg would like to have them go for it again—hook, line and sinker—and give him a crack to bring the championship to the United States.

Mines In Georgia Increase Output To Aid War Effort

(By United Press)

ATLANTA, Ga.—Georgia, already prominent in the production of granite, marble and clay products, is rapidly becoming an important mining state.

Attributing the change to the war, state geologist Garland Peyton pointed out that ten years ago miners were getting $7,500,000 worth of minerals out of Georgia, whereas mineral income this year will go well over the $20,000,000 mark.

Georgia has led the nation in the production of granite, has ranked second in marble production for a long time, and last year turned out 83 per cent of the clay products of America.

When war conditions brought on a dire need for iron, a new mining industry sprang to life in Georgia. Income from iron in the state this year will go over $2,000,000, as compared with $564 in 1933, and $722,013 last year, Captain Peyton revealed.

Gold digging, for years a thriving industry in Georgia, has been pushed into the background to make way for mining of important war materials, especially mica.

The mining of aluminum ore, bauxite, has taken an upward step in the state with an estimated $231,981 return last year, the geologist reported.

Never operating to full capacity before the emergency, Georgia now has two of the South's largest cement plants going full speed.

Peyton also named limestone and asbestos production as leading industries in the state, adding that Georgia is at present searching for oil as a new source of mineral wealth.

San Francisco has become the great storage center for Australian wool for the duration of the war.

Indians, In Second Place, Sorry To See A's Leave Town

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, Aug. 14.—The second place Cleveland Indians bid a farewell to the Philadelphia Athletics—victims of four straight beatings—after today's windup of the current series.

The Redskins moved into their present league standing by capturing yesterday's contest 6 to 4 for their eighth victory in nine starts and their sixth in a row.

Mel Harder kept the Mackmen in hand with eight hits to chalk up his fifth win of the season against three losses, but needed help in the ninth after two were out. Allie Reynolds relieved the veteran right-hander and retired the final batter.

The Indians scored three times in the fourth inning and added another trio of runs in the seventh against Don Black, who allowed 10 blows.

Roy Cullenbine walked to open the fourth. Mickey Rocco's single and a pass to Manager Lou Boudreau loaded the bases. Black's wild pitch scored Cullenbine and Ray Mack's one bagger tallied Rocco.

At the present time the Sahara team is tied with Barborton Lotter and the Akron Orphans for first place in the second half of the Akron Class A league with two wins and no defeats.

Coy who pitched and won the first game from Placencia, or Dan Guiglin, former Kent State star, will be on the mound for the Saharas with Grucio catching.

Hratic will do the pitching for Placencia with Simpson or Gaughn behind the bat.

ROOKIE SLUGGER ON GUARD FOR BOSTON

(By Associated Press)

Elmer Nieman, a rookie outfielder for the Boston Braves is providing the finest clutch hitting in baseball.

In the last week he has decided four important games. Yesterday getting a two-run homer in the tenth inning to beat Chicago 5-4 and force the Cubs back into seventh place.

Last Saturday Nieman hit his second home run of the season in the ninth inning to beat Brooklyn, on Sunday he smashed a ninth-inning double to down the Dodgers again and Thursday his triple in the 12th inning whipped the Cubs.

Although his batting average is .274, eighteen of his 55 hits have been for extra bases.

The Braves-Cubs game yesterday was the only contest in the national league to escape inclement weather, but the American league had a full program highlighted by the Cleveland Indians defeating Philadelphia and taking undisputed possession of second place.

Cleveland was unable to gain on the New York Yankees, however, because Spud Chandler pitched a 4-0 shutout over the St. Louis Browns.

Luke Appling, veteran shortstop of the Chicago White Sox, bagged the 2,000th hit of his career with a single that drove in a first-inning run and Chicago went on to clip the Boston Red Sox 3-2.

Rudy York, who had hit seven home runs in the last six games, was stopped by Milo Candini's six-hit pitching as the Washington Senators walloped the Detroit Tigers, 11-3.

EDEN MAY JOIN QUEBEC PARLEY

Foreign Secretary's Visit In Canada and Moscow Hinted In London

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Speculation in Quebec that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden might go to Canada to participate in the Allied strategy conferences was interpreted in London today as an indication that the Allies had reached a policy-forming stage in regard to handling the Axis, its satellites and occupied countries.

The foreign office said it could not comment on reports of Eden's prospective trip, but it did not deny such a move, and English newspapers were permitted to write interpretatively about it.

The foreign office also refused comment on speculation that Eden might go from Canada to Moscow. Stating that Eden's participation would indicate adoption of a common Allied policy toward Italy when the capitulates and a review of both present and post-war pacific policy, Frank King, the British Press association's diplomatic correspondent, said that "in all these matters the Russian government will be consulted at every stage."

Meanwhile the Daily Telegraph said British and American statesmen are expected to visit Russia in the next few weeks, and added that there is no misunderstanding between the United States, Great Britain and Russia.

Huge Messerschmitt Factory Is Bombed

CAIRO, Aug. 14.—A strong force of African-based Liberator bombers of the U. S. Ninth air force plastered the huge Messerschmitt aircraft works at Wiener Neustadt, on the Danube river, 27 miles south of Vienna, in a heavy daylight raid yesterday. Middle East headquarters announced today.

The planes, which attacked from a high altitude, flew a round trip of nearly 2,500 miles to drop nearly 350,000 pounds of high explosive bombs.

"Wiener Neustadt is only 200 miles south of the deepest point of penetration into Axis Europe from England," an American military spokesman said, "thus showing that no point in greater Germany now is immune to attack by air."

1943 LAMB MARKET SMALLEST SINCE '39

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—The 1943 lamb crop was about five per cent less than the 1942 crop and the smallest since 1939, the Department of Agriculture reported today. Lamb provides only a small portion of the nation's total meat supply, usually around five per cent.

The department estimated the crop this year at 31,101,000 head, or about 1,500,000 head under last year. Reduction in the crop in the western sheep states, according to the department, was mostly a result of conditions other than weather and feed, which were not greatly different from the previous year.

BOY SLAYER FACES CHARGE OF MURDER

The police officer added that the youth, who will be 18 next month, also confessed to the abduction and criminal attack Wednesday on Jack Buchanan, son of City Food Inspector E. B. Buchanan.

Reporter's Tip Is Clue
Detectives credited Reporter Tod Simon and Photographer Andy Kraft of the Cleveland Plain Dealer for the tip that led to Hager's arrest. They encountered the Lakewood youth Thursday morning prowling around a field in suburban Westlake village where police had found the abducted Buchanan boy in a dazed and bleeding condition.

Simon said the youth's surly attitude and his unusual interest in looking over the spot where the Buchanan child had been found aroused his suspicion and he jotted down the license number of the car Hager was driving.

Story quoted Hager as saying he first saw the Collins twins late Thursday afternoon when they had set out to caddy at Lakewood Country club.

"They were trying to thumb a ride," the detective quoted Hager. "Passed them up as I went by the theater on Detroit road, but then turned around and picked them up. I killed the one who said his name was James first and then I shot the brother. I guess the reason I killed them was because I didn't like them."

Lancaster Parolee
The detective said Hager also intended to kill the Buchanan boy. "I told him I was going to kill him, but he begged me so hard not to that I took a liking to him and decided not to do it."

No charges have been placed against him.
Hager's police record disclosed he had served 11 months at the Boys' Industrial school at Lancaster, O., for automobile theft.
A psychiatrist at City hospital said the youth had been released from the psychiatric ward only Monday at his mother's insistence. Detective Carl Shattuck of Lakewood reported the mother had him committed to the hospital July 7 after he threatened to violate his parole and resort to tire stealing to get spending money.

"He wasn't a bad boy, just wild," his mother declared.

OPENING OF ROUTE 14 BRIDGE SUNDAY

Bridge On Route 224 Opens August 22; Both Span Berlin Reservoir

one three foot sidewalk completed. The sub structure on this bridge is built and ready for the addition of another 24 foot pavement and another three foot sidewalk.

Although the bridge is 408 feet long it was necessary to fill on both sides to such a height that it required 442,000 cubic yards of material to provide approaches for the bridge.

This fill on the east is 60 feet high and 330 feet wide at the bottom.

The extensive sub structure and fill necessary can be pictured to some extent when it is realized that the new bridge is 56 feet higher than the original bridge, which crossed the Mahoning river on the old Route 224.

When the Berlin reservoir is filled there will be 64 feet of water covering most of the sub structure.

In the early stages of construction on this job much serious difficulty was encountered and considerable damage to equipment was done. The flash flood of Dec. 30, coming just two months after work had been started, covered equipment and washed away much of the material on hand and also washed away much of the grading and other work done early.

Heaviest Ohio Truck Load
The opening of this bridge on Sunday, Aug. 22, will return to regular channels the heaviest truck load carried by any state highway in northern Ohio. The average daily motor vehicle traffic over Route 224 at this point is 2408 trucks and 2404 passenger cars.

This is the only route in this area that carries a larger number of trucks than passenger cars. Most of the truck traffic is through-hauling of heavy war materials.

When this bridge is opened for traffic every vehicle will save 16 miles a trip. Traffic has been detoured over Routes 45, 18 and 45.

This structure and approaches, a total of a little over two miles, were built for the Ohio Department of Highways by the Hinman Brothers Construction company of Pittsburgh, at a cost of $641,418, and will be open for traffic almost four months ahead of schedule.

Wm. H. Wadman, assistant division engineer in charge of construction for the Ohio Department of Highways, called attention to the wooden hand and guard railing on both bridges. These were placed by the department and will remain for the duration of the war to conserve valuable metals for war uses.

Explains Deferment Of Farm Essentials

LISBON, Aug. 14.—Stressing the necessity for a uniform system for the deferment of farm men, Col. C. M. Donner, head of the state Selective Service occupational deferment, advised a closer co-operation between the county draft boards and the county farm war board in the classification of registrants, when he met with members of the "Young Men's" courthouse here Friday afternoon.

Col. Donner decried the wave of optimism over the status of the war, stating "we have just begun to fight and the problem of supplying men for the armed forces and yet maintain the production on the home front through the proper classification of men has become a very serious problem to the draft boards."

"However, the referral of cases involving farm men to the county farm war board for an investigation on the premises under a uniform system now being advanced by the state board, will greatly alleviate this condition," Col. Donner pointed out.

The replacement of deferred farmers also was stressed as one of the duties of the farm war board through the cooperation of the draft board in furnishing a list of men in the 4-F classification, Donner added, stating that "none are exempt or deferred for the duration, and should be so informed by their draft board."

Accompanying Col. Donner and making short addresses during the meeting were John Cummings, of the Ohio U. S. D. A. War board, V. C. Reese, classification auditor and Edward S. Neese, chief of public relations of the state Selective Service department.

The meeting was attended by members and clerks of the three draft boards in the county, and members of the Farm War Board, which includes: George H. Rogers, Salem chairman; County Agent Floyd Lower, Harry D. Holloway, Howard VanFossan, Earl Shade and Emil Malinovsky.

American Artillery Knocks Out Entire Enemy Gun Position

By HAROLD V. BOYLE
WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY BEYOND TROINA, SICILY Aug. 10. —(Delayed)—How American artillery fire wiped out an entire battery of 12 heavy enemy guns and destroyed 18 vehicles—one of the most remarkable feats of the Sicilian campaign—was described today by a young officer.

"It happened three days ago as we were fighting through these hills," said Lieut. Adgate Dier of Stevenson, Md., aide of the artillery general. "One of our forward observers at twilight spotted two enemy guns and then saw flashes of a number of other field pieces nearby."

"He called down to the battalion for a few adjusting rounds and then pulled in three more battalions—a total of fifty-four 155MM howitzers and self-propelled and towed 105MM guns—on the target. "When they cut loose it looked like they were blasting the hill in half. They poured in a concentration of five rounds each in a three-minute barrage. That turned out the lights for the enemy battery. No more fire came from them."

"Next day our infantry was able to pass this position and found signs indicating that all 12 guns had been in line close together."

"Doughboys found seven guns totally wrecked and 18 enemy vehicles smashed by our fire. About a mile down the road they came across three more guns in such bad shape that the enemy had been forced to abandon them, and still farther along they discovered two more damaged guns which the Italians, after trying to tow away, had blown up."

"So we got 12 out of 12. It's a very unusual thing to catch and knock out an entire battalion of enemy artillery. I don't recall any time in the Tunisian campaign when we got that many guns together at one time."

A UNITED STATES BOMBER STATION IN ENGLAND, Aug. 13.—After he and Capt. Clark Gable had just been missed by a chunk of flak on a Fortress raid over Germany, Master Sgt. Cupp, radio operator and gunner on the Fortress "Ain't It Gruesome," yesterday was on his 15th raid over Germany when the flak burst tore through the ship three feet from where he was standing. It was a close call for the former movie star, standing near. It was one of 15 such bursts that the ship survived.

The War Today

are fighting so fiercely against the onrushing Reds in Russia. The Hitlerites know that they have a chance of getting back home.

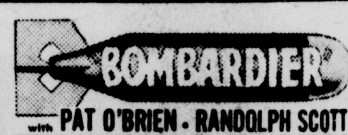

So far as concerns the Italian situation, even if the Badoglio government should surrender the Allies are able to overrun the lower three-quarters of the peninsula rather easily, there still must be a terrific fight along the defenses of the Po, if the Allies choose to force the issue. And behind the German army of the Po there is the great Brenner Pass for retreat into the Reich.

This characteristic of the German of folding up "once you get him down" is something to keep well in mind in these fast moving days.
